SHIRLEY ADELMAN

A Nightmare

Two in the morning,
I wake from a nightmare,
my heart beating faster,
than a car speeding by.
For a moment, I am
a seven year old,
hearing footsteps,
approaching—
——my room
helpless until,

I turn on the light and,
see myself,
an older woman, alone
at home, where only
she holds the key.

Shirley Adelman is a writer of poetry and creative non-fiction. Her work has been published in academic, literary, feminist, and medical humanities journals in the United States, Canada, Israel, and South Africa. Much of her writing deals with issues of social justice, both historical and present.
