

ANONYME

rumeursadorées

Caresse-moi de tous tes doigts fais-moi vibrer se cambrer mes courbures et se cabrer mes seins mes reins et mes os Donne-moi et prends ces baisers envoûtés et laisse-toi frémir quand j'effleure tes contours et ta peau Ton corps contre le mien faisons-les se toucher se rouler se mouler se sentir se goûter se jouir et s'ouvrir Soupire Oui Soupire
 Et dans le crescendo de tous nos désirs laissons-nous aller et laissons-nous venir

CATHERINE LAKE

Reception

The skin of her arm gathered then folded under mine, lapped across my chest as her finger's fallen hem veil the cusp of my breast.
 Our knees creased together make pleated spines, the nightgown curves and wraps:
 a vesture from which threaded dreams recall the warp of a girl's wedding-napkin-hat; while our folds and flaws are joined in uxorious sleep.

Catherine Lake's poetry appears earlier in this volume.
